Zion National Park — Fall Foliage

Canyon Cottonwoods • Towering Cliffs • Legendary Trails • Cool Autumn Hiking

Orange County • Hurricane • Zion Canyon • Kolob Canyons • Las Vegas — 4-Day / 3-Night Trip

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 13 - MONDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 2026 • EASY-MODERATE HIKES • OPTIONAL: ANGELS LANDING, THE NARROWS, KANARRA FALLS

Trip Overview

A 4-day, 3-night fall foliage road trip from Orange County to Zion National Park: a full day in Zion Canyon (Riverside Walk, Weeping Rock, Emerald Pools), a day on Kolob Canyons or the east side, and a relaxed day to wrap up before the drive home. Two lodging options: 3 nights in Hurricane, or 2 nights in Hurricane and 1 night in Las Vegas.

Core hikes stay easy to moderate. Moderate-to-strenuous routes and the Kanarra Falls water hike are optional and depend on permits and November conditions. This departure is within 3 months, so it is offered as a last-minute booking (75% / 25% payment).

What to Expect in Mid-November

Fall foliage: color on the Zion canyon floor (cottonwoods along the Virgin River, maples, and boxelders) typically peaks from late October into early November, and mid-November is usually the late, golden end of the season. Color often lingers along the river and in Springdale, Hurricane, and St. George, but timing varies by year and weather; higher areas such as Kolob Terrace are usually past peak. We will share a foliage update before departure.

Weather: cool days (about 55–65°F) and cold nights (low 30s–40s°F), with sunset around 5 PM. Bring layers, gloves, and a warm hat for mornings. Water hikes (The Narrows, Kanarra Falls) are cold and need exposure gear.
